Rev. Frank E. Barton

Rev. Frank E. Barton of Rockport, Mass., dropped dead at Gloucester, Mass., last Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 30, while waiting for a bus to carry him to his home.

Mr. Barton is pleasantly remembered by many friends here, where he was pastor of the Universalist Church from 1889 to 1893 and 1895 to 1903. The following is taken from The Gloucester Daily Times:

"The aged minister, beloved by all denominations in Rockport, was standing on the curb, and sensing an ill spell, turned to his left as though to walk away when death struck him down."

Dumbfounded, those standing wait for the bus were powerless to act, until Capt. John Hinekey of the Central Fire station, going to his home for supper, went to the rescue and lifted him from the ground.

Capt. Hinekey sent in a call to the fire station for the Squad A wagon, which responded speedily, and although Capt. Fitz Robinson could feel no pulse, he rushed the minister to the hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

Pastor in Rockport 17 Years
For 17 years Rev. Mr. Barton served the First Universalist church of Rockport, during which years the membership and strength of the church has greatly increased.

He was born in Saco, Maine, in June, 1852, being the son of Isaac and Roxanna Miller Barton. When a mere child his family moved to Roxbury, where Mr. Barton attended the public school, graduating from the Roxbury High school. After his graduation he attended the St. Lawrence University and Theological School of Canton, N. Y.

His first parish was at Bethel, Maine, followed by one at Mechanic Falls, after which he returned to Bethel, Maine. While serving his second pastorate at Bethel, Mr. Barton was superintendent of the Universalist churches of the state, this being the highest position in the Universalist churches of Maine. During these five years Mr. Barton also edited the Universalist Banner, the Maine's State Universalist paper. Because of ill health he gave up this work and retired.

Harrison Heckman, national representative of the Red Cross was in town Wednesday and expressed his appreciation of Bethel's contribution to the Red Cross.

Red Cross membership cards and buttons are at I. L. Carter's store. The annual roll call will take place between Armistice Day and Thanksgiving.

STUDY NEW TRAFFIC SIGNALS

The last legislature changed the rules for drivers and it is well for everyone to study the new signals. An arm protruding from the car ahead means the driver is: (1) Knocking ashes off a cigarette; (2) going to turn to the left; (3) pointing to a scenic spot; (4) going to turn to the right; (5) telling small son to keep still or dad will feel no red pop; (6) going to stop; (7) feeling for rain; (8) going straight ahead; (9) saying to his wife, "Holt yes, I ordered the water"; (10) going to turn down; (11) waiting to a girl friend on the sidewalk; (12) going to back up.

Thurlow-Holt

Lawrence F. Thurlow and Miss Ethel Holt of South Paris were united in marriage at the home of the bride Wednesday evening, Oct. 31, at 8:15. Rev. R. H. Colby officiated, using the double ring service.

Mrs. Thurlow is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Holt. She is a graduate of South Paris High School, and has been employed as a stenographer.

Mr. Thurlow is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Thurlow. He is employed at Mechanic Falls, and they expect to reside at that place in the near future.

REBEKAHS HONOR LOVEJOYS

The regular meeting of Sunset Rebekah Lodge was held Monday evening, Nov. 5. Supper was served at 6:15. As this was the last meeting before Mr. and Mrs. Davis Lovejoy leave for their winter home in Florida, a special program was arranged in their honor.

Mrs. Lovejoy was presented with a lodge pin by the lodge.

SONGO POND

E. O. Donahue was going the rounds Friday and Saturday, soliciting funds to aid in the United Parish work.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gorman and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gorman and baby were Sunday guests of their daughter and sister, Mrs. Linwood Averill and family of Rumford.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Merrill of West Bethel were callers at E. O. Donahue's Sunday.

Mrs. Inez Bean who has been staying with her sister, Mrs. W. I. Becker, has gone to Norway for a while.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Ramsell were at their cottage "Samson" Sunday. Silas Littlehale was a dinner guest at A. B. Kimball's Sunday.

THE PATTONS ARE COMING AGAIN

Two years ago, The Lowell Patton Trio, announced the musical attraction on the opening day of the coming Chautauqua, was featured over this same circuit of towns by the Swarthmore Chautauqua Association, and it is due to an almost universal request for their return that they are being scheduled in this territory this fall, it is announced.

Lowell Patton and his artists—Edward Quelen, baritone, and Johann Quelen, flutist—present something entirely new, unique and original in what has been aptly called a "Futuristic Musical Program." There is no other entertainment like it and there is no program of recent years anywhere in the Chautauqua field that has so thoroughly won the unstinted approval of Mr. Patton and his associates come from Portland, Oregon.

Lowell Patton dramatic interpreter, composer and pianist, is a well-known artist of the west coast country. When eight years of age he was studying piano and singing in the celebrated Boys' Choir of the Trinity Church in Portland. At fifteen he was organist of the Pilgrims' Congregational Church of that city, and began to teach piano and organ. Three years later he was organist at the Taylor Street Methodist, one of Portland's largest churches, and at nineteen he held the same position in the First M. E. Church. He was organizer of the Portland Philharmonic Trio.

He was chosen as pianist with the famous Flying Squadron a few years ago, playing in every principal city in the United States. As a "gob" during the war he was chosen song leader at Bremerton Navy Yard, where his work was phenomenally successful. He appeared with many organizations, such as the Royal Purple Orchestra of Portland, was accompanist for Frances Soule, harpist, and later with Frances Ingram. January, 1923, found him in London and Paris, for additional study and new material for his company.

He is gaining for himself a reputation as a composer and three of his songs have just been published. They are "Pearls," "Sea Pirate's Lullaby," and "A Tender Thought." Several of these numbers are used on the program.

There is snap and action in the brilliant program offered by Mr. Patton and his talented associates. Gorgeous costumes are worn in the various "episodes" of the program. The costumes and drapes were created by Modan Hush of San Francisco, a leading costume designer of the west.

Lowell Patton has achieved success and has gained for himself an enviable reputation not only in the United States, but in Canada, New Zealand, England and France, because of his thorough musicianship, originality and refreshing personality. He is a pianist of real achievement. The program he offers is of high class and worth-while in every particular, yet one which has a wide popular appeal.

Edward Walton of Auburn, who was sentenced in the recent term of court to six days in the county jail for driving while intoxicated, was released after serving eight days. His release was ordered by the attorney general, after a physician had given testimony regarding the condition of Mr. Walton's health.

Gould Academy Notes

The honor roll has been posted for the first six weeks and the following have maintained an average rank of over 90%: Rebecca Carter, Elton Glover, James Alger, June Brown, Katherine Carter, Frances King, Emil Johnson, Barbara Herriek, Kathryn Herriek, Catherine Lyon, Mark Hamlin, Richard Stevens.

Those having an average rank of 90% in all but one subject and 85% in that: Margaret Carter, Howard Brooks, Ruby Knapp, Ruth Brink, Esther Burris, Evelyn Whitman.

A very interesting program of declamations was enjoyed in the assembly hall of Gould Academy Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. A musical selection was rendered by Kathryn Herriek at the piano and Addison Saunders and Daniel Wight, violinists.

Friends and parents of the pupils are cordially invited to attend these interesting programs.

Basketball

Basketball practice started last Thursday night with twenty-one players reporting. Coach Anderson stressed many important phases of the game and set the squad to fifteen men. Captain-elect Willard Holmes and Chesbro are rounding into form again and a great deal of anxiety is being shown for a position on the regular five. The team has a great deal of work to do with only sixteen more practices before the first game.

The schedule to date as proposed by Mr. Glover is as follows:

Dec. 7. Bryant's Pond at Bethel.
Dec. 14. Bridgton H. S. at Bethel.
Dec. 20. Berlin H. S. at Bethel.
Jan. 11. South Paris H. S. at Bethel.
Jan. 18. Norway H. S. at Norway.
Jan. 25. Mexico H. S. at Mexico.
Feb. 1. Lewiston H. S. at Bethel (pending).

Feb. 8. So. Paris H. S. at So. Paris.
Feb. 15. Norway H. S. at Bethel.
Feb. 22. Rumford H. S. at Bethel.
Mar. 1. Berlin H. S. at Berlin.
Mar. 8. Bridgton H. S. at Bridgton.
Mar. 12. Mexico H. S. at Bethel.

Undergraduate Association Meeting

The annual meeting of the Undergraduate Association for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year was held Oct. 31. They are as follows:

President—Carlton Holmes
Vice President—James Alger
Secretary—Helen Carter
Member of the Executive Board—Charles Freeman

Manager of Basketball—Elton "Gyp" Glover
Assistant Managers—Basketball—Charles Chapin, Emil Johnson
Manager Baseball—Howard Douglas

Assistant Managers Baseball—William Wight, Theodore Eames
Manager Track—Ernest Hancock
Assistant Managers—Howard Brooks, Irby Davenport

Manager Winter Sports—Carlton Holmes
Assistant Managers—Francis Eastman, Daniel Wight
Manager Tennis—Addison Saunders
Assistant Managers—Joe Stevens, Jim Chesbro

Manager Girls' Basketball—Iva Bartlett
Assistant Managers, Rachel Beane, Dorothy Keady

The Girl Reserves held their recognition service last Tuesday evening in the gymnasium. The ceremony was very attractive, the gymnasium being lighted only by candles. It was well given. Much credit is due the girls, also Miss Littlefield. Seventeen new members were taken into the organization. Dancing and games were enjoyed and refreshments were served. Mothers and sisters of the girls were invited.

BARN BURNED ON PARADISE STREET

Marshall Hastings' hay and storage barn on Paradise Street was burned to the ground last Thursday night. The fire was discovered shortly after five o'clock before it had made much progress and the firemen were on the job at once, but the fire was by that time in all parts of the building and it was impossible to get it out.

A new Ford coupe, owned by Ernest Moreau, was stored in the barn and was saved together with some logging equipment belonging to Mr. Hastings. The loss is estimated at $5000.

During the fire Fred Clark, a member of the Hook and Ladder Company, suffered very painful injuries to his left knee when he was hit by a fire hook. He is able to be about with the aid of a cane.

BRYANT CAR FOUND

The Ford touring car stolen from C. C. Bryant on Oct. 20 was found at Inwood, Vt., in the woods, stripped of battery, tools and everything movable.

The young men who took the car were found on a construction job at East Hamet, Vt., by Sheriff's Harrington and Frothingham and Sheriff Pilot of St. Johnsbury. They are now at the South Paris Jail, where they have been bound over to the February term of court under $1,000 bonds.

Local Radio Users Annoyed

Radio fans in and around Bethel are reporting much annoyance from users of regenerative sets. The Public Laws passed by the 83rd Legislature last year make it unlawful to use sets which disturb other sets.

Chapter 215

An Act to Render Unlawful All Disturbances to the Reception of Radio Waves Used for Radiotelephony.

Sec. 1. It shall be unlawful to use within the state of Maine any radio receiving set which radiates radio waves, between two hundred and five hundred and fifty meters wave length, thereby causing interference with the reception of any other radio receiving set unless said radiating set shall be rebuilt or redesigned to prevent said radiation.

Sec. 2. Whoever knowingly, maliciously or wantonly by any means unreasonably disturbs the reception of radio waves used for radiotelephony, between two hundred and five hundred and fifty meters wave length, shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten dollars and not more than fifty dollars to be recovered by complaint in any municipal or police court or before any trial justice.

Two Injured at No. Bethel

A Locomobile straight-eight sedan driven by James D. Kaine of East Milton, Mass., crashed into a tree near the Tim Jewett place between North Bethel and Newry Corner Sunday afternoon about five o'clock.

Wallace Dubuque of Hubbard, Me., and Omer Beauchemin of Fairhaven, Mass., passengers were rushed to the Rumford Hospital, where Beauchemin remains in a critical condition.

Kaine and John D. Pierce, the third passenger, were taken to South Paris where Pierce is held as a witness, and Kaine was arraigned in court and his case continued until it is known whether Beauchemin will live.

It is said that the car was stolen by Kaine when parked at a church at Hingham, Mass., about 11:30 that morning and was travelling at a high rate of speed.

BEAR RIVER GRANGE

At the next regular meeting, Nov. 10th, Rev. Mr. Edwards of Bethel will give a talk on Armistice Day and "World Peace."

TIME IS UP, BOY

He had been in love with her—hopelessly, he thought—for a long time. Then, one day as they were sitting together, she looked tenderly at him, and murmured:
"Claude, didn't you tell me once you would be willing to do any act of heroism for my sake?"
"Yes, Claude, I meant what I said," he declared.
"Well, Claude, I want you to do something really heroic for me."
"Speak, darling, what is it?"
"Ask me to be your wife. It's time you did, don't you think?"

Most Familiar

After dinner the well-known song-writer and his guest tuned in the wireless.
A brand-new song was played, and the guest liked it.
"That's a good melody," he remarked.
"Good?" said the piano player, "I should think it is. Why, I've written it myself 12 different times!"

DOING NOTHING

She—What's your brother doing now? He was trying to get a government job awhile ago.
He—He's doing nothing, he got it.

Air Castles

Building castles may not pay. Polish sport, I know. Now and then I finish a modest bungalow.

Outgrown

She—How true it is that the older we grow the less we appreciate the things that used to delight us in childhood!
He—Yes, especially birthdays—Stacy Stories.

Orders Must Be Obeyed

Small Town Cop—You can't go through here with your cut-out open.
Motorist—But I have no cut-out on this car.
Cop—Then get one put on and keep it closed.

Why Not?

Booker the Agent—I can't use your ventriloquist act at that private entertainment. It's for a deaf mute school.
The Ventriloquist—But I work the dummy a lot of the time. Leave 'em watch it. They're all lip readers.

DULL EVENING

"Last night I called on the most correct girl I've ever met."
"I had a pretty dull evening myself."

Quite the Reverse

Although he makes a husband good, the wife who finds him to his wife is not the one she bought.

A Shy Model

"I want you to pose for a bostery advertisement."
"I don't think I could don any spectacular costume."
"Just as you are."

Ark Overcrowded

Isle (looking up from her book)—What are prehistoric animals?
Wise Willie—Oh, those are all dead. I guess they were the ones that were left on the dock when Noah sailed.

Signs Point That Way

Ford Mamma—Do you think he'll propose soon, Doris?
Daughter—Yes, mamma; he's been making so many complimentary remarks about you.

Note From the Border

Tourist—I suppose the people were quite agitated when that gang of international thieves went through here?
Native—Yes; the government even put locks on the canal.

Ignorance

The Master—What is ignorance?
The Pupils—Ignorance is when you don't know something and somebody tells it to you.

Willing Worker

"My appeal is to the plate peasant."
"Go away here. Don't you want us to get out the good looking notes?"

Where Great War Nared End

The marble slab marking the spot where the German armistice car stopped in the woods near Rethondes, France, before meeting the allied commanders.

What the End of It Meant to the Boys

A vivid description of what Armistice day meant to the men at the front is given in a letter written by Captain Vandergrift, in France, to a friend at Washington. Although it was penned three days after the actual signing of the armistice, it carries with it as true a picture of the aftermath of war as might be found in a search of all the files of the War Department. The letter is as follows:

"At the Front,"

"Nov. 14, '18."

"Dear Boss:

"It seems so strange to write in absolute security, free from danger and the new sensations are as hard to get accustomed to, and even more so, than those of the opposite nature. No more gas sentries to awaken sleeping soldiers; no more light guards to reveal that the position is not disclosed at night; no more ducking, instinctively, for there are no white wings making huge holes in the air and making the enemy's train. Peace it is, and as such it is realized, more here than elsewhere.

Morning of the Great Day.

"Eleven o'clock on the eleventh came just in time, and until then had actually ceased to be a doubtful question that it would ever stop. Firing had been quite intense for three days and nights and the battery had moved into as many new positions in that time. They were anything but comfortable ones, either. Just before dawn on that eventful day the orders were to move forward, up with the infantry; dawn found us up there, but as it happened, there was a heavy fog, so heavy that it was difficult to select a good place for the guns and impossible for the Hun to spy us. The guns were placed and the ladders moved to the roads when the fog opened up on the road with machine guns. Then occurred a lull, the orders, halting, halting, halting, halting along the road to safety. At last the battle of getting 'laid' men finally digging shallow shelter trenches for themselves and their ammunition, the 'ditch' being it across the terrain running the telephone wires. A pretty mucky sight, especially since there were many shells falling 'imports'. It was merely the evening's searching fire, for the battery could not be seen.

Artillery Kept Busy.

"By this time we were in action and firing at dangerously fast rate, at least dangerous to the enemy, who though we could not see him we knew where he was by the map; that's all one needs to know these days. A few more minutes and every piece of artillery, Allied and enemy, on the entire front was in action, from the sound of things, and the earth fairly rocked. All was going well with the battery when it was caught in a deadly barrage—a curtain of fire, then the missiles rained. A bit of mustard gas, orders to withdraw the men, safety in friendly shell holes—this was the sequence during the next hour—and to the shell holes we stuck, for it was suicide to even crawl over the ground. The particular shell hole I was in was as big as an office building. I wished at that time that it were as deep as the ocean. Had it been struck the only necessary ceremony would have been to have stuck six little wooden crosses in the ground where we were. There were four consecutive duds that hit within a few feet of the hole, any one of which would have done the work had they exploded. Each one in its turn brought forth a fervent 'Good old him', and when three more duds afterward struck just as close, I felt sure that we were spared for further work. Hugging the Ground.

"This awful 'strafing' continued for two more hours and for that length of time we didn't venture far from safety. The hole was even comfortable with a good supply of cigars which I thoughtfully or by chance had with me, except for an occasional sniff of 'gas.' Just before communication with the rear had broken off I had been informed that all firing would cease at 11. At 10 minutes of 11 business picked up considerably and at two of—all hell broke loose—it was then I had my doubts and as I followed the second hand of my watch through those two centuries of minutes I suspected that Foch had forgotten to notify the Kaiser. But at 11—and the signatory powers must have synchronized their watches—all firing ceased and the silence was painful. It was a dramatic, almost tragic end to a horrible bombardment and incidentally to the war. For the war is only an incident when one is being shelled out of a position. I've often admired the old-toothed charm of an 'Eik' and have seen the clock's face thereon. I do not know the time it tells, whether it is 5 or 12 or 11 o'clock, but if it's set at 11 I want to be a brother Eik and wear a clock, for that holy hour saved my battery from destruction.

Thoughts of 'Home.'

"The burning questions with us now are, Will we return to the States immediately; will we go into Germany as troops of occupation or remain in France to police up the 'Huns' and fill in the shell holes? My striker says he saw enough of France the first week. He now thinks that this country wouldn't be so bad if it weren't that there are so many foreigners here. I've seen a lot of French Lorraine—it is a wonderful country—more so than the low lands of the southern France, but southern France, like most southern countries, raises (and supports) beautiful women, so much in its favor, and we don't care much for scenic beauty 'no how.' Then there are the wines of the southern districts—but why talk of love—

"Have moved twice since starting this letter, the first time back into a dense woods into a dugout, safe and comfortable. I am now back at the battery position where the combat train and horses are located. It is on the horses that we will now concentrate, for it is on them that much depends if we are to move. My big sorrel was killed last week, in a pinch he was attached to a caisson to haul ammunition to the guns. A 'big one' hit the road nearby, killing a few horses and wounding several men. The driver riding this particular horse had his leg punctured by the shell fragment which killed the horse. We have had several narrow escapes like that."

Nine or ten years are not much in the life of a nation, but they take quite a big slice out of the life of a man. The boys who have been cooped up in their little hospital ward, so many of them unable to leave their beds in all these long years, know the relativity of time. By the observance of Armistice day, though, they know that a nation never forgets; that men who were willing to sacrifice their lives and careers are honored by their more fortunate brothers who came out of the war unscathed and untouched and by those who, perforce, were the stay-at-homes.

The observance at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, with a Presidential message, was heralded throughout the nation as a token of peace. From the hills of Arlington to the far-flung corners of the country, when all heads were bowed in one minute's silence on the eleventh hour on the eleventh day of November, reverberated reverence for the national security echoed and re-echoed over the land—and while there will always be preparation for war and the security that comes with preparation, the men who hold the destinies of the nation in their hands pledged themselves that America will have no war of its own seeking.

Day of Memories.

If there is war, it will be thrust upon her, and then, bowing to the inevitable, America will go forth again to the grim business. This is the attitude of the nation and the faith of the people. In the ten years past America has seen its industries reach a peak never known before in its 130-odd years of existence. Its people are hailed as the wealthiest on the globe; its workers are housed better than those of any other country. Prosperity has brought with it all the comforts of life—and yet in all this luxury of material comfort, Armistice day each year never loses its spiritual touch. In the silence of little homes and great mansions there will be read letters similar to the foregoing written by Captain Vandergrift. Little mothers, their heads bowed, their hearts filled with tender memories, will read words their sons had written in Flanders' fields; sons, some of them, reading now beneath the poppies. So Armistice day carries its message; one that will never be forgotten so long as the nation endures.—Washington Post.

Lesson of the Day

The anniversary of Armistice day will be observed in vain if some thought is not given to the subject of war. The world has never been more emphatically inspired to devise ways to end war. It has passed through the most devastating war in history. It is filled with war-weakened people eager to find the way to peace. But it is also restless and uncertain about the prospect of peace. Many believe that the best way to avoid war is to keep armed and ready for any emergency. These possibilities offer a wide range of choice to committees in charge of Armistice day celebrations.—Indianapolis News.

America's Peace Part

The people of America may look back over the last ten years with the knowledge that they and their government have been of great material aid to the nations of Europe in their struggle for survival and regeneration in the postwar period. More America has by counsel and moral support helped to bring about a better understanding, a more earnest desire for permanent peace among the nations of the world.

Duty's Eternal Call

The call to duty in peace is imperative and as important to answer as the call in war. The conflicts of peace lack the glamour of battle. But they take their toll in lives and sweat and labor. The men who answered the call to the colors in 1917 and 1918, and who returned today are on the firing line again in the incessant upward struggle of the nation.

After the Great War

After the great war, the world was a different place. The conflicts of peace lack the glamour of battle. But they take their toll in lives and sweat and labor. The men who answered the call to the colors in 1917 and 1918, and who returned today are on the firing line again in the incessant upward struggle of the nation.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1928

cepted a position as pastor for the joint parishes of Fairfield and Waterville, Maine. From Fairfield Mr. Barton accepted a call to the First Universalist church of Rockport.

Beloved by All.
Mr. Barton has been a faithful and beloved pastor of Rockport's First Universalist church. Last March he sent in his resignation but was asked by his parishioners to remain with them, which he said he would be most happy to do, with their kind assistance towards making this year the happiest one in his long life of church work. Many times during this past year he has told his family of his great happiness in being able to serve another year and that it was indeed a happy year.

Rev. Mr. Barton possessed a friendly disposition, always seeking and finding the best in others. Within the church he will be greatly missed, as well as to the life of the community.

October 11 last, Mr. and Mrs. Barton celebrated their 44th wedding anniversary.
Mrs. Barton, formerly Frances Elizabeth Fogg of Brownfield, Me., a daughter, Mrs. Agnes, wife of Lee Haskell of Hallowell, and a son, Dr. Frank E. Barton, survive Mr. Barton.

Every year in the Universalist church was taken and many people stood during the funeral service.

Rev. Clark L. Paddock, of Pigeon Cove, and schoolmate of Rev. Mr. Barton during one of his years at theological school, opened the services, reading from the scripture and telling briefly and touchingly of his long friendship with the deceased pastor.

Rev. John Charles Lee, D. D., of Worcester also spoke, Mr. Lee, having been a classmate of Mr. Barton for many years, the latter having studied under Rev. Mr. Lee's father while a student at theological school. Rev. Mr. Lee told of Mr. Barton's exceptional character, of his great love for his fellow men, a love that surpasses all other love.

The Bethel male quartet of Bethel sang for a selection during the service including "In the Garden," a favorite song of Mr. Barton's. Joseph E. Gosssett, Stephen Marston, Harry Mills and Rev. Clark L. Paddock of Ashby Lodge, and the Mason's service. Rev. Mr. Barton having been a Mason for 30 years.

SEASONABLE SNIPS

A fall of snow on Christmas day is regarded as a sign of a lucky New Year.

When the Partons were in power in England Christmas day was kept as a solemn fast.

The idea for such folly was the original Christmas story, a boy he was rewarded as a lion was taken.

In the olden times the Yule log was always laid before it was burnt out so that the next Christmas day the new Yule log might be lighted from the charred remains of its predecessor.

Swedish and Finnish brownies bake a big cake in the form of a heart for Christmas. It is known as the Yulekake. All through the day the strange cake stands in the center of the room uncut. Some think it is left there until spring. It is regarded as a luck bringer.

How They Welcomed Peace

Ten years ago, November 11, most of the civilized world forgot all other emotion except an unbounded joy at the news that an armistice had been declared in the World war. Photograph shows an informal parade gotten up by members of an American division at Barle-Duc, France, with the aid of the inhabitants of the town, upon receipt of the news.

Armistice day, a veteran of the World war relates, found my division in rest billets at Barle-Duc, with my regiment in a little village in the Vosage mountains, south of Verdun, which went under the magnificent name of Grand.

First official news that the armistice had been signed was received by the mayor of this little French village and the news was quickly spread, so that all the inhabitants, consisting particularly of women and old men, were on the village streets within a few minutes.

The men of my regiment were quickly notified and almost mobbed by the happy French people, the women, in particular, expressing their joy by hugging and kissing the American soldiers. Our own regimental band played the French and American national anthems and the French people danced and sang up and down the streets waving French and American flags which they secured from some unknown place.

The mayor of the village invited the officers of my regiment to drink to victory with him and all of us adjourned to the ever-present cafe, where he set up champagne in an luxurious supply, to which the American soldiers did full credit. The celebration continued down into the night and really lasted for several days thereafter.

A member of the division took the snapshot of the scene reproduced here.

Ten Years Ago at the Front

A decade ago Second division troops of the A. E. F. left a French rest camp for the Bellican "road" battlefront to help resist a German offensive.

The former doughboys and leathernecks in that World war outfit held their annual reunion festivities at St. Louis last June.

Led by Col. Harford McSider, president of the Second Division Association, a half dozen generals, 100 or so colonels and majors and several thousand "top kicks," "second lancers," corporals and privates, were present or accounted for when the operation got under way.

Much can be obliterated from memory in ten years, but it is doubtful if any of the Second division will have forgotten that daybreak a decade ago when the long convey changed out of the rest area near Chaumont-Vaux with themselves aboard.

Five but the officers who had seen the orders knew whether they were headed. Vague reports of the German success of Chemuldrum-Dames had been heard, but the officers and men did not comprehend the gravity of the situation. "For the second time in four years the German high command was throwing its gray-clad troops toward Paris, and all the Allied strength had been unable to stop them.

The Second division started out in gay fashion. The men cheered, sang and yelled. Then the convey came closer to the front. They passed a long line of refugees and the singing and cheering stopped. The spectacle of those thousands of terrified people, fleeing desperately from their homes, gave the men their first profound understanding of the horrors of war.

Inferno of War.
At Meaux the confusion was terrific. The city was choked with refugees, wounded men, troops and trains of every description.

North of Meaux the troops were debussed. The Ninth Infantry started immediately on a forced march to the line and the other regiments bivouacked for the night. German bombing planes made frequent visits over the camp and there was little sleep. At daybreak, June 1, the Infantry and machine regiments marched toward Montreuil-sous-Lions, reaching positions in the rear of the line through General Vaux, Derocches and Belleau woods that night, with nothing but a thin line of heroic French soldiers between them and the enemy.

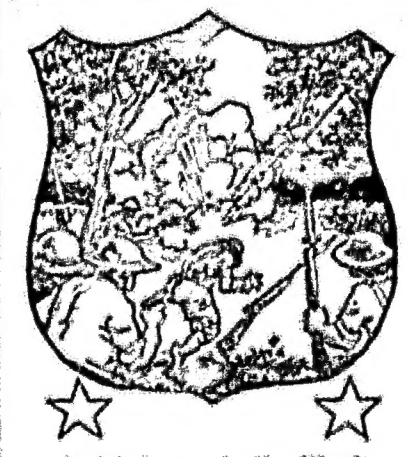

Read to Paris blocked.
June 1 the Infantry began to block the Paris highway, and the next day all the Infantry of the division was in line, with the Ninth on the right and the Marine brigade in the center. The "Third Infantry," one battalion of machine and the Fifth machine battalion had been thrown along the line through Veslly, Fremont and Combaud to reestablish liaison between two French corps which were reluctant the Germans at this point. Scattered French units still were holding the line. They had been engaged for six days, with little food and no rest. The nights of June 3-4 they were relieved and passed through the American lines.

June 4 the Second division was holding a 12-kilometer front, with no reserves between it and the Marne. It had crushed one enemy attack near Veslly.

The first of a series of small, but difficult advances began June 6. From then until June 25 the fighting, particularly on the front of the Marine brigade, was most desperate. Division after division was thrown into the line by the German command in an effort to shatter the American lines between Vaux and Torchy. The machine guns ground their way slowly but steadily through the Bois-de-Belleau, and June 25, in a final brilliant dash, killed or captured the last Germans in the region. In recognition of the marines' heroic work the French changed the name of the woods to Bois de la Brigade Marine.

Morale Unshaken.
In the meantime the Third brigade had been holding its part of the line, morale unshaken by the constant and terrific shelling to which it was subjected. This outfit, like the marines, had no other cover than the shallow "fox holes" dug in the early part of June, and no food except "doughy meat" and the one cooked meal a day which came up at midnight. By July 1 the brigade had captured Vaux and the Bois de la Roche. July 9 the division was relieved by the Twenty-fourth, taking up a reserve position along the line Montreuil-St.

A Hot Corner in the Woods.

Around it had been in the line 40 days. In that time ten German divisions had been faced, from which had been captured 1,600 prisoners. Not only had the Second stopped the German drive on Paris in that sector, but it had advanced to an average depth of two kilometers on a front of eight kilometers. The losses totaled 9,131, but the Second division had demonstrated to the world that the American soldier had "arrived."

Remembrance

The hour has struck the smoking guns are silent, still. We daily wonder why the amazing silence stuns. Our year, long used to battle thunder, We are charged splinters that were trees In ravaged, shell-torn earth, blood-spattered, And know that we are like to them— Our lives, our hopes, our bodies shattered.

Ten years have passed; the scars of war, Though cruel, deep, are slowly healing; Grain ripens where it did before, New furrows unplowed earth concealing. Men follow little gods, no more; The frenzy, high emotion, devotion; Perhaps forget the boys who gave Their all who sleep beyond the ocean.

Thank God, this day is yet not idle For reverent commemoration; For we to have a grateful pride And find a deeper consolation. Our comrades of those silent days Who shared the needful, grim and gory, Need not our homage nor our praise— They win themselves the greater glory!

Strong Ones of Earth

There are the strong ones of the earth, the mighty food for good or evil—those who know how to keep silence when it is a pain and a grief to them; those who give time to their own souls to wax strong against temptation, or to the powers of wrath to clean upon them their withering passage.—Emerson.

ALONG LIFE'S TRAIL

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois

AS GOOD AS HIS NEIGHBORS

Goodwin is running a little church in a country village where, if the truth be told, there are perhaps too many churches striving to put across their own particular dogmas and at the same time to maintain an existence and a semblance of influence.

"How are you getting on?" I inquired of Goodwin when we met at the club in the city. I had known him years before when he was a younger and a more energetic man.

"Oh! moderately," he said, "we don't have the interest or the enthusiasm which I should like. The membership isn't increasing as one would wish it were, and it's pretty difficult to keep our heads above the financial waters, but I suppose I should not complain or be dissatisfied, for we are quite as good as our neighbors."

I didn't tell him that to be as good as one's neighbors is often to be commonplace and ineffective, for the neighbors are not always getting on in any amazing way.

Blake is running a store down town. There is nothing in his show windows to attract attention. If in walking down the street you should pass his place of business, you would not hesitate at his door attracted by anything more than ordinary in the display. Blake's store is surely as good as that of some of his neighbors; the attention you would receive if you went within would be the ordinary attention of clerks who are a little bored with their jobs and not incited by any business ambitions some day to be the best salesman in town. Possibly they are as good as their neighbors, but that is only faint praise at best.

World's Sourest Substance

Vinegar is about five times more effective than lemon juice in making things sour, but a substance exists even sourer than vinegar. This is phosphoric acid, the active principle of the "acid phosphate" so much used in soda water flavors. This is the world's sourest known material.

The Message of the Unknown Soldier

Nameless I lie here where patriot hands bore me from the fields of battle to my homeland, and flowers today are being gently and reverently laid by patriot hands upon the sod above me. Within the shadows of peace that now unfold me there are many nameless ones and they wait as proudly and with as glorious memories as the shades of those whose names are emblazoned with their deeds in monumental stone. For there is neither caste nor station among the dead who died for duty, in the cause of humanity, at the call of one's country. We are of the equal brotherhood of the greatest love—for "greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

Nameless I lie here, and so I know that it is not the impulses of ordinary human love, or of family ties, or of friendship's bonds, that prompt the hearts of those who come today with flowers to tend me on that the unknown dead have not been forgotten. The love that speaks in these remembrances, we who died for it know, is one that far transcends the natural affections that find their fullest fruition within the homes of our country. It is a love that speaks in clear, unselfish, sacrificial recognition of that greater love which, breaking all ties, has gone forth from time immemorial to pay "the last full measure of devotion" in protection of humanity's homes and in defense of humanity's homelands. It is a love that is rooted in the soil of one's native land, voiced in its patriotism, symbolized in its flag. It is typified, too, in the graves where the nameless soldier sleeps, unknown by birth or life, yet remembered in that transcendent love of country which they shared and for which they freely paid the tribute of their lives.

So, from the peace that passeth all understanding of a world of strife, let our voices be heard. Let peace on earth be the aim of common sense and statesmen, but may we never cease to cherish, with zealous watchfulness, the spirit that will stand ready, when called upon, to preserve your liberties, to make a haven for the oppressed, to keep secure the nation that protects your homes.

Lesson of Day Must

Never Be Forgotten

By resolution of congress and proclamation of the President November 11 is observed as Armistice day. While in observance the memory of those who lie in Flanders' fields should have the place it fully deserves, those living who fought "over there" should be given the credit that is theirs, never to be taken from them. But above all, observance should bring to each and all of us realization of our indebtedness to both.

Too much do we Americans regard service to our country, whether on the battlefield or in public office, as ours by right. Under our form of government there is no right except that which we establish and maintain by our voluntary devotion to the principles for which our government stands. If some serve in our army and navy, or in public office, others must maintain all that defensive forces and administrative organization stand for. This means better and better citizenship by us all, and points our part in Armistice day observance.—Grit.

Honor Those Who Went Through Fire of War

The members of the A. E. F. went to war like crusaders in the Middle Ages, filled with a mighty zeal. They came back, those who did, with a new feeling of nationalism and greater love for their own country. When the Statue of Liberty greeted them in New York harbor and howling mobs of their own flesh and blood yelled in joyful glee over their homecoming, they got a greater glimpse of the true spirit of life. They had been through the fire and the gold, and had been tried; they had come out of it different men, but better. And these are the men who, on Armistice day, 1928, ten years removed from the maelstrom of war, have regained the great grip on themselves; have re-established themselves in the arts and sciences, the business enterprises and the professional callings of the nation. They have carried on in peace as they did in war; soldiers all.

President Wilson's Words

"The only way in which we can show our true appreciation of Armistice day is by resolving to put self-interest away and once more formulate and set upon the highest ideals and purposes of international policy. Thus and thus only can we return to the true traditions of America."

These were the concluding sentences of a radio message by Woodrow Wilson on the eve of Armistice day, 1922. It was his last formal message to the public. Three months later he died.

NORTH NEWRY

Guy Vail has moved his family to Bethel for the winter.

Arnold James who has employment at North Berwick, was in town calling, Sunday.

W. W. Kilgore who has spent several weeks in H. I. with relatives, returned home Thursday. Wilbur Kilgore accompanied him home for a few days of hunting.

Miss Catherine Hutchins of Andover attended the Harvest Supper and Dance Friday night and was an over night guest of W. B. Wight and family, Saturday, returning home Sunday morning.

Mrs. A. C. Littlehale and Miss Mary Lane of Errol, N. H., are visiting at W. B. Wight's.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Ferren are entertaining friends from Worcester, Mass., who are here on a hunting trip.

About 25 friends and neighbors gathered at the home of W. B. Wight, Monday evening to help celebrate his 82nd birthday. Mr. Wight received a nice basket of apples from Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bennett.

Frank Ferren went to Byron, Me., Sunday, where he will visit his daughter, Mrs. Knapp.

Frank Vail, Jr., was at home from Norridgewock over the week end.

L. E. Wight attended the banquet and meeting of the Oxford County members of the Legislature at Bethel Inn, Monday evening.

The Circle Supper at W. B. Wight's was well attended Saturday night. Rev. and Mrs. Robert Haldane of Errol, N. H., were present.

Services were held at the church here Sunday A. M. The subject of Mr. Haldane's sermon was "Joy".

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Lord and daughter, Alvena, from Rumford spent Sunday at H. H. Morton's.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Emman of Bethel are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter. Mrs. Amy Bennett of this town is caring for her.

Miss Doris Morton is spending a few days with Mrs. Haldane at Errol, N. H.

A Halloween entertainment was given by the Powers and Branch schools. The entertainment at the Branch was given in the afternoon. The children from the Head of the Tide and parents were guests. The Powers school gave their entertainment in the evening. Many of the parents and friends attended. A fine program was given by both schools and enjoyed by all.

The Head of the Tide school has been closed the past week on account of the severe illness of Miss Chamberlain's brother.

Miss Doris Morton is having a two weeks vacation from H. H. Hastings' law office at Bethel.

The Harvest Supper and Dance held at the Grange Hall was well attended.

Miss Jeannette Bailey spent the week end with Mrs. Alter Reed, Rumford.

E. G. Brown and Lester Pratt with the State compressed air drill have been in town blasting ledges at Horse Shoe Falls.

The Circle Supper was given Saturday evening by Mrs. Abbie Littlehale of Errol, N. H., at the home of W. B. Wight, with about 50 present. Strenuous views were shown by Rev. Robert Haldane consisting of "Churches of Maine" which were much enjoyed by all.

Miss Marguerite Quint spent the week end at H. L. Foster's, Bethel River.

Francis Vail of Norridgewock spent a few days recently with his family at H. H. Morton's.

HANOVER

Mishamokwa Temple held their annual inspection Friday, November 2nd, with Mrs. Amelia Schwind of Rumford as D. D. G. C. A bountiful dinner was served at noon by the committee, Mrs. Amy Marston, Eva Hayford and Nellie Holt. There were sixty members in attendance including visitors from Ossoline Temple, Rumford, Naacoma Temple, Bethel and Unity Temple, Errol, N. H.

The Hanover school under the direction of the teacher, Gene Saunders, put on a very pleasing Halloween entertainment at the schoolhouse, Saturday evening, Nov. 3. Home made candy was on sale during the evening and quite a sum was realized for the benefit of the school. The following programme was given: Song by the school; Recitation, "Little Orphan Annie"; Ruby McPherson; Selection on the Victrola; Dialogue by the first grade; Drill by the upper grades; Song by the school; Callisthenics; First and second grades; Poem by the school; Recitation, Philip Barabara; Dance; Second, Third and Fourth grades; Selection on the Victrola.

The next was a short play supposed to take place in the October (Queen of Fate) Wood. October, Queen of Fate, gives the ghosts, cats, witch, or more often called venge, one more chance to be good. The figures forget their plans, but the queen. The queen goes to Mr. Thor for advice. He advises having pictures taken of the rogues, and then sending them to the Moon. Such as today all we have on Halloween is pictures of ghosts, cats and witches. Two characters were: Queen of Fate, Leona Barlow; Mr. Thor, Herman Richardson; Ghosts, Angus McPherson and Richard Brown; Cats, Chester McPherson and Chester Goddard; Witch of Midnight, Louisa Brown; Cynthia, Ruby McPherson; Bat, Mary McPherson; Mole, Wanda Tibbitts; Photographer, Alpha Powers.

Members of Oxford Free Lodge accepted an invitation to visit Norway Lodge, Thursday evening and a good time is reported by all who attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Barrows of Durham were guests of his sister, Mrs. Helen Silver over Sunday and Monday.

OUR OCTOBER BUSINESS

was the largest (with the single exception of December) in the history of our store

Our volume of sales during October was our largest for any single month since we have been in business (excepting December which is in a class of its own because of the Holiday business)

We are most grateful to our customers to whom we owe this splendid record. The increase in our business in October and for the whole year since we opened our new store means a great deal to us. For the volume of our sales indicates our degree of success in anticipating and meeting the needs and requirements of the great majority of the people of Maine and Northern New England:—

In making this the store to turn to for all that is new, smart and attractive; for all that meets the ideas and desires of youth; for what is attractive and to the liking of their elders; for what is sound, practical and dependable; for assortments that always insure satisfactory selections; for the lowest possible prices consistent with good quality and workmanship.

In making this a store that gives equal consideration to the wishes of those more concerned with what they want than price and to the interests of those who from choice or necessity make every penny count.

If you've been our customer, but have not traded with us lately, we believe it will pay you to try us again.

If you've never been our customer, we trust you will give us a trial; that you will like our merchandise and our values.

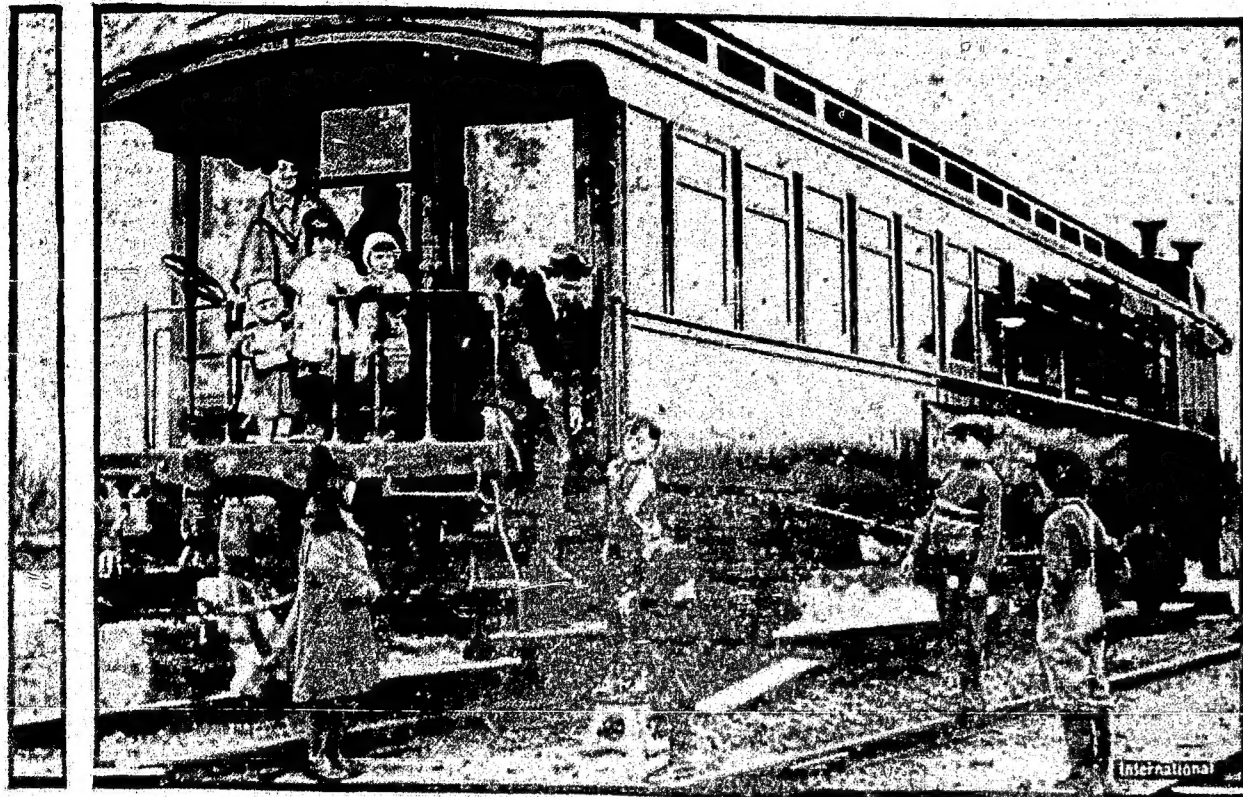

If you ARE our customer, we thank you and promise to do our best to continue to please you.

Porteous,
Mitchell
and Braun Co.

Carrying Education to Canadian Children

If the children cannot go to school the school must go to the children. This is the principle accepted in certain newly settled districts of northern Ontario, where regular school facilities are not yet available. A railway passenger car has been converted into a complete school room and teacher's home and is serving a district 150 miles in length. It brings education to the children of railway section men and others not in organized school districts.

Not Much Chance Involved

By RAY LEWIS

(Copyright.)

MRS. BRAYTON was tremendously disturbed. Never since Molly's babyhood days with their anxieties attendant upon scarlet fever and measles combined had she been so exercised. Molly was about to choose a husband.

Now, some girls are not in a position to choose. They must wait and be chosen. Not so with Molly. Apparently only two applicants were still in the running—Tom Hall, fairly poor, unquestionably solid, and Bates Schuyler, fairly rich, unquestionably insecure.

Some mothers would have preferred Bates. Mrs. Brayton, ranking character above prosperity alone, preferred Tom. While Molly herself—but at this point we arrive at the reason for Mrs. Brayton's disturbance. Molly apparently loved Bates. Mrs. Brayton deduced as much from a brief colloquy she had overheard. Bates had brought Molly home from the theater and Mrs. Brayton, parentally sitting up for her daughter, had unwittingly caught Bates' parting words and Molly's response as they stood together a brief moment in the hall.

"To have you say you love him, Molly, is more than any man deserves," Bates had said.

"But, remember, Bates," came Molly's whisper, "nobody knows it yet and I haven't really said 'yes'."

With Mrs. Brayton's disappointment for herself mingled her sorrow for Tom. By Molly's own admission, she wasn't as yet irrevocably bound. Suppose it wasn't too late—suppose a removal from Bates' undeniably fascinating personality would lessen the attraction! It was worth trying.

Over their toast and grapefruit the following morning, Mrs. Brayton sprang her scheme. "We leave for Highland lodge this afternoon, dear," she said quite casually.

Molly, a bit of toast half way to her mouth, paused in astonishment. Then she slipped the morsel between covering red lips. "Lovely, mother," she acquiesced.

While her mother was packing, Molly said good-by to Bates over the telephone and wrote to Tom, who was away on a business trip. Three hours later she and her mother were on the train.

The letter which Molly had written found Tom in a stuffy little hotel in one of the smaller cities of a western state.

At the end Tom paused as if he could not believe the words he saw. Then, like a released spring, he jumped to his feet, pulled out his watch, seized a timetable and was out of the door.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Brayton reminded herself frequently that if there was ever a case of out of the frying pan into the fire, she was its illustration. Bates Schuyler was bad enough, but the young man Molly annexed the third meal in the dining room at Highland lodge was a great deal worse. His having graduated from high school with Tom Hall was not, in her eyes, sufficient pretext for allowing him to take her daughter canoeing, rowing and walking at all hours. The day came when Mrs. Brayton decided on a bold stroke. If Molly could enjoy so greatly the companionship of a comparative stranger, her feeling for Bates could not be very deep. A word to Tom and his arrival at the right moment—again Mrs. Brayton's hopes mounted. A telegram economically expressing the situation in ten words went over the wires.

Highland lodge was at its loveliest on the night that Tom arrived.

Molly was waiting for Jack Penrod. But when he came Molly had vanished—vanished into the arms of a tall stranger, who turned as Jack approached, then held out his hand and cried, "Jack Penrod, as I live!"

And Molly, emerging shyly, held out a slim hand, too. "Mr. Penrod has helped some tedious hours pass, telling me about the things you used to do in school, Tom," she said.

Later Mrs. Brayton received the explanation which was certainly due her.

"I don't see," she complained, bewildered, "how you can love Bates Schuyler and Tom Hall at the same time, Molly! I overheard you tell Bates you loved him even if you hadn't quite said 'yes'."

For a moment Molly looked blank. Incidentally so did Tom. Then she laughed joyously. "Oh, mother, I see it all! You carried me off to this place because you heard me tell Bates, who had just asked me to marry him, that I couldn't because I loved another man, although I hadn't told him so yet."

"Well," said Mrs. Brayton after a moment, "so much is clear. But how did Tom finally discover that you loved him? He came here because I telegraphed."

"Not altogether," smiled Tom. "When your telegram reached me I was speeding this way. You see, before your telegram I received a letter from Molly in which she said—"

"he looked at Molly for permission to go on, and Molly, in spite of a self-conscious blush, allowed him to continue. 'Mother is carrying me off to Highland lodge, and I'll marry the first man who comes to my rescue!' So I took no chances, but came at once!"

"There wasn't much chance involved!" laughed Molly. "You were the only man to whom I wrote of my predicament!"

OBSERVATIONS

Be stubborn if you want to. But a fellow who sets his head seldom hatches out much.

These days it is useless to look to mother for ples like mother used to make. Mother is longing for them, too.

Of course, you can't tell. But the chances are the fellow who is a yes-man around the office is a yes-man at home.

WOULDN'T HELP HER TO SPOIL ILLUSION

G. H. Fallon, the slogan king—Mr. Fallon is the author of the famous "Safety First"—said at a dinner party at Pierre's in New York:

"The three great modern industries are the movies, the motor car and beauty making. If beauty making in its various branches—in its facial clays and nose-shaping machines and reducing instruments and dear knows what—well, if beauty making grows much bigger it will forge ahead even of steel."

"And yet—"

"Well, a lady went into the editorial department of a magazine the other day and said:

"I wish to see the beauty editor, please."

"An elderly editor looked up at her in a grave way from his copy."

"Are you following our beauty editor's advice, madam?" he said.

"I am," she said.

"The editor said 'no' to it."

"Perfect confidence."

"Then you don't want to see her," said the editor.—Springfield Union

Most fellows also have their roses. If you look at it that way, and some of the best scenery in this broad land is about the elbows.

Science has developed a tiny broadcasting station that gives out super-sound waves, oscillating 20 times as fast as those that can be distinguished by the human ear, capable of destroying the living matter of life cells without injuring the cell walls. It is thought possible that the discovery may have an important bearing upon the medical science of the future.

What intrigues the imagination, however, is the suggestion that the so-called "death ray" may have been discovered. If a tiny broadcasting station, operating with a 75-watt tube from 110-volt alternating current, can destroy the living matter in cells, is it not possible to erect a superstation capable of dealing death to whole armies?

E. J. Therrien of Sanford, Maine, was much surprised when a policeman stopped him and called his attention to a smiling two-year-old baby boy on the running board of his car. Mr. Therrien was able to identify the baby. He placed him on a safer seat within his car and took the child home.

Muggins—"Now that his wife is dead, I wonder if Brownsmith will continue to live in that big mansion of his." Buggins—"I don't know, but I size Brownsmith up as the sort of fellow who would rather get married again than move."

A first-rate intellect is a third-rate lover.

In love, man's love of self increases, woman's vanishes.

Love was woman's invention, but man has exploited it.

A woman is at home in love. A man is scarcely more than a guest.

It is sad to have to admit some, times that the object of life is not love.

We may as well love ourselves, for we shall never find sufficient love elsewhere.

Last Sunday the Staff cooperated with the Norway and South Paris ministers in a general exchange of pulpits. Mr. Bull preached in the South Paris Universalist Church, Mr. Wentworth in the Norway Baptist and Mr. Townsend in the Norway Methodist Church. In their places Mr. Morgan preached at North Waterford, Mr. Colby at North Waterford, and Mr. Tetley at East Stoneham. At Albany the time of service has been changed to 2:30 P. M. and Mr. Townsend spoke there. Mr. Wentworth conducted the evening service at North Lovell and Mr. Bull the Young People's meeting at East Stoneham.

The moving picture, "The Iron Horse," will be shown throughout the Parish this week. Some changes in the schedule will be necessary on account of the Council meeting on Thursday evening.

The Annual Meeting of the Council will be held in the Grange Hall, South Waterford, on Thursday afternoon and evening. A supper will be served by the South Waterford ladies, and the address of the evening will be by Rev. Oswald Hughes, Superintendent of the Portland District of the Methodist Church.

Following the Council, Rev. Mr. Hughes will conduct the Annual Meeting of the South Waterford M. E. Church.

Next week, Nov. 11th, there will be shown a World Service Moving Picture entitled "From Krait to Mine and Mine to Krait." This shows life in the native villages and in the diamond mines of South Africa, and the influence of Christian missions upon the natives as they come into contact with white industrial civilization. The rental of the film will go to the support of an African hospital, and any excess over expenses will be credited to the appropriations of the United Parish churches. A silent offering will be taken at each showing. It will be shown at South Waterford Sunday evening, Nov. 11, North Waterford, Thursday evening, Albany Thursday evening, and Sunday, Nov. 14, at East Stoneham. It will be available for other places on Wednesday and Friday evenings.

Plans are being made for a World Service Thanksgiving to all the churches on Sunday, Nov. 25.

The Unexpected Happens

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright.)

THE gray road-ster had covered miles after miles of the fine mountain roads before it took a wrong turn that brought it suddenly to a sandy road through deep woods. So narrow was the track that Melton Bush kept steadily on his way, hoping for a chance that further along there would be a place to turn around.

When he did stop, it was to gaze at a tea room at the side of this out-of-the-way mountain road—such a gay little cottage, all pine boards and yellow paint and scarlet geraniums in green boxes, that Melton stopped the roadster with a definite jerk that brought a trim-skirted girl to the tiny front porch.

"Oh!" she uttered surprisedly. Mr. Bush's leveled eyes surveyed her critically. "May I have something to eat?" he inquired.

She stared, and then lifted a young, scared voice.

"Yes?" came a lovely feminine voice out of the air above the roadster, and when Melton Bush looked up he saw a charming girl stepping down from a seat built high among the hemlock branches.

As the branches swung back from her passing, the young city man was aware of the spicy fragrance of hemlock, and then, the girl was pausing beside the car.

"Wouldn't you like something to eat out of doors, here under the trees?" And when he heartily agreed, she showed him where he might wash his hands at a bench.

When he returned to the front of the cottage a small yellow table had been laid with a square of white linen and a bunch of yellow poppies in a yellow pottery jar. On the table yellow pottery plates were large baked potatoes, a puffy omelet, fresh tomato salad, a blackberry tart, a small pitcher of thick cream, and a cup of delicious coffee.

"How did you evolve this magic?" inquired Melton Bush of the smaller girl, who stood uneasily near by.

"Miss Susan fixed—prepared—it," she said primly.

In a moment the charming Susan appeared at the door.

"Do you wish for anything more?" she inquired in her lilting voice.

"Nothing more, thank you," he said, rising. "It has been a delicious meal, and I can only wonder how you can do business on this lonely by-road."

She regarded him seriously. "To tell you the truth—we have been here for six weeks and you are our first customer."

"Six weeks! Why didn't you close up and go back to town?"

She smiled sadly. "There was no little money to travel—and now that it is almost gone we cannot get back to town. My father, who was quite ill when we came here, has been so much benefited by the air."

"Who did you buy this place from?" he interrupted.

"Wilbert Higgins. He led us to believe that it was on the motor highway—and the owner is that very rich Melton Bush, who owns so much land that only his agents know how much he has. You would think, wouldn't you, that he was rich enough without cheating a woman out of her very livelihood?" She looked indignantly at Melton Bush, as if she really knew his name as well as she seemed to know his reputation.

As for the rich Mr. Bush, he merely paid his modest little bill, and declared he would stop the next time he came that way and have a meal.

A few days later he went to see Mr. Higgins. The agent took him to the blushing when confronted with the yellow bungalow deal.

"You told us to get rid of all extra holdings, Mr. Bush," he explained, "and if the lady had advertised she might have attracted people."

"Buy it back from her now! Give her one thousand dollars more for her trouble and inconvenience! Then she paid you for it—and get her town address for me—see?"

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Higgins quite meekly, and went to work on the property transfer at once.

Weeks afterward, Melton Bush went to the Chester Square address that Wilbert Higgins had given him. He rang the shining brass doorbell and was shown into the presence of Susan Higgins.

"Why—Mr. Bush?" the girl exclaimed, glancing at his card. "How could I know that it was you who came to the tea room that day—and I should never have talked so foolishly, but, really, I was discouraged, then."

"It was the happiest day of my life," said young Mr. Bush. "Your experience of the hands of my agent has changed all my plans—hereafter, I shall be my own agent, and at least earn my living. How is your father, Miss Higgins?"

So Melton Bush made the acquaintance of Susan Higgins, and it was not long before he was a friend of the family, and then Susan's accepted suitor.

Their honeymoon was spent in the tiny cottage in the woods, and one day Melton said to his wife: "Susan, darling, what were you doing in the hemlock trees the first time I ever saw you?"

"I was crying," she confessed, and then let husband know that she should never weep again. And, so far, he has kept his word.
